

All Sessions are in the Park Library Auditorium at Central Michigan University

Morning Session, Friday, Sept. 26

9:00–10:30

Stephen Darwall and Kelley Schiffman, Yale University

“Hume and the British Rationalists’ Disagreement about Obligation: What is Really at Issue?”

Commentator: Robert Stecker, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Robert Noggle, Central Michigan University

11:00–12:30

Luigi Turco, University of Bologna

“Hume and the Celebrated and Benevolent Moralists”

Commentator: James Moore, Concordia University

Moderator: Andrew Blom, Central Michigan University

Afternoon Session, Friday, Sept. 26

1:30–3:00

Peter Kail, Oxford University

“Price and Hume”

Commentator: Mark Shelton, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Heather Kendrick, Central Michigan University

3:30–5:00

Allison Kuklok, St. Michael’s College

“A Reply to Hume on Causal Power: What Locke Would Have Said”

Commentator: John Wright, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Matthew Katz, Central Michigan University

Morning Session, Saturday, Sept. 27

9:00–10:30

Louis Loeb, University of Michigan

“How Hume’s Anti-Cartesianism Leads Him to Make Concessions to Reid and Rationalism”

Commentator: Gary Fuller, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Aaron Griffith, Central Michigan University

11:00–12:30

Jacqueline A. Taylor, University of San Francisco

“Education and the Female Sex: Catherine Macaulay and David Hume”

Commentator: JoEllen DeLucia, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Joyce Henricks, Central Michigan University

Afternoon Session, Saturday, Sept. 27

1:30–3:00

M.A. Stewart, Edinburgh

“Hume and 18th-Century Critics of His Philosophy of Religion”

Commentator: David Smith, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Guy Newland, Central Michigan University

3:30–5:00

Ryan Hanley, Marquette University

*“Smith’s ‘Natural Principles of Religion’ vs.
Hume’s ‘Natural History of Religion’”*

Commentator: Brian Coleman, Central Michigan University

Moderator: Laurel Zwissler, Central Michigan University

Free and Open to the Public